Permanent Jewelry Terminology & Myths

Terminology & Myths

The term “permanent jewelry” is created to describe that the piece of jewelry does not have a clasp. Permanent Jewelry in its truest form is fine jewelry and requires the care equal to other removable fine jewelry. It is not indestructible and requires ongoing cleaning and care. Jewelry that is considered “permanent” is welded with a trusted and high-quality welding machine.

Other terminology used by the industry includes: “welded”, “zapped”, “linked”, “forever”, just to name a few. If a jewelry is not welded, it does not constitute being “permanent”.

If you have questions, contact Issa Luma Jewelry PRIOR TO booking an appointment so that you may make an informed decision.
